

Author's perspective

The invaluable asset of a woman through out her whole life is the "Virginity" integrity.

A once married lady's life due to the interruption of unlucky marriage has been much lowered, compare to her pre-married status: For that damaged ladder, due to her intervention of the marriage the position of undignified condition is undersirable.

Many of the marriages were disrupted not to her any kind of fault but this has occurred due to the unavoidable bad luck and unforeseen circumstance, an unrepairable damage done become a divorced women unnecessary.

Are they of the present age recognizing the pure virginity as prescribed by traditional customs?

Should not be social rulings apply on the lady's own characteristic, moral conduct or upon her disruption of marriage as a divorcee? This shall not be so to protect the rights of female beings. Why should not we count her purity on her good mentality and honourable instincts?

This novel has written with the sole aim of to look for the disappearance of some unlucky misunderstanding on a wider scope to reach a reasonable valuation on her decency and inability to ward off the unlucky enforcements as attached by human nature.

This novel has reproduced for the second time to publish due to many requests demanded by repeated phone calls and letters as well as at the seminars of literacy meetings, with my sincere hope to prove the unfairness on the ill fated ladies.

For dear readers,
with love and amity.

Yin Min Oo (I.M.)